Highland House Introduces Designer Classics Occasional Accents

For the October 2006 High Point Furniture Market, Highland House presents Designer

Classics occasional accents – an eclectic, 20-piece collection of traditional accent furniture specifically designed to coordinate with the company’s high-end living room upholstery collection by the same name. Designer Classics occasional accents include such style genres as: Beidermeier, Chinese Chippendale and Regency, and features six rich, new, multilayered antique finishes. Also, the company is adding a total of 16 new sofa, chair and ottoman designs to Designer Classics upholstery at this market.

“Occasional accents are a natural extension of our popular Designer Classics upholstery,” says Tom Staats, president of Highland House. “The eclectic nature of these traditional occasional pieces offers our customers the ability to mix or match any number of classic traditional designs with our upper-end upholstery. For the past two years, we have added to and expanded our European Excursions groups – Cotswold Cottage, Rue de Provence, Le Cinque Terre and Scandinavian Simplicity. Now that those collections are well established, we took the opportunity this season to return to our roots by focusing on classic, traditional living room designs.”

From formal traditional styles to designs that are more relaxed and casual, Designer Classics upholstery by Highland House is always at the fashion forefront. In addition to quality, Highland House is renowned for its visual differences, which include more than 30 special wood finishes, a constantly updated selection of 1,000 high-fashion fabrics, superior tailoring, plus a variety of luxurious trimmings and embellishments. Add to the equation a range of seating comfort levels, and it is apparent that Highland House furniture offers both style and superb value.
